Resident, Water Street

- Believes the direction taken is great and is supportive of agriculture.
- Believes the maximum farm residential footprint of 2,000 m2 is far too large.
- Believes this will increase the cost of farmland and will negatively impact farm land.
- Encouraged Council to reconsider the maximum size.
- Opposed to this large footprint.

Sukh Paul Bal, McCurdy Road East

- A large maximum farm residential footprint can be appropriate and these policies should take into consideration the best interest of the farmer.
- Believes there should be some flexibility based on the size of the farm and the level of farming undertaken.
- Suggested that staff should know the farming activity when an application is submitted; the applicant should be giving back to the community and not just fitting within the parameters of what's written in documents.
- Believes the province is way behind on protecting farmland.

Michael Stang, Timberline Road

- Has been planning and working towards adding a carriage home to his property for the past 11 years.
- Recently submitted an application to rezone to A1c.
- After years of planning feels unfairly caught up in these Bylaw amendments.
- Responded to questions from Council.

Helen Potts, Glenmore Road N.

- Resides on land that father purchased in 1973.
- The Province imposed the ALR in 1975.
- Their land is not serviced by an Improvement District and the lack of water negatively impacts their ability to grow multiple hay crops each year.

- Believes there are too many restrictions on ALR land and raised concerns regarding the future of their property.
- Responded to questions from Council.

Staff:

- Reviewed the residential footprint zoning definition.
- Responded to questions from Council.

Darren Schlamp, Manhattan Drive

- Made reference to correspondence previously submitted.
- Questioned lack of public consultation; when compared with the City's consultation on the Urban infill Ru7 initiative.
- Spoke to the implications of setbacks and landscape buffers on existing lands.
- Referenced the Ministry of Agriculture Guide to Edge Planning and questioned whether that process was followed; this is not one size fits all for this.
- Believes this is a one sided package being brought forward and there will be a loss of land value in the millions in this area if this is approved.
- Responded to questions from Council.

There were no further comments.
